

Mitigating Avalanche Hazard

Submitted by Eric Knoff on Mon, 03/28/2016 - 10:28

There were 15 avalanche fatalities in the western United States in January, 2016, the deadliest January in over 20 years. Five of the fatalities were snowmobilers, one was a snowbiker, six were skiers, two were snowboarders and one was a climber. Avalanches are an equal opportunity killer and do not discriminate. To avoid becoming a statistic follow three simple rules of backcountry travel and learn to manage terrain and snowpack carefully.

Mitigating Avalanche Hazard.pdf

Publication

MSA

Date of Publication

Thursday 2/25/16